Position description

JEL Classification: Q2 (Renewable Resources and Conservation); Q3 (Nonrenewable Resources and Conservation); Q5 (Environmental Economics); O1 (Economic Development); C1 (Econometric and Statistical Methods and Methodology); A1 (General Economics)

The Department of Agricultural and Resource Economics at the University of California, Berkeley invites applications for a tenure-track assistant professor position. Relevant fields include, but are not limited to, agricultural economics, natural resources, environmental economics, energy, international trade, applied econometrics and data science, labor, development, industrial organization, and public finance. Candidates whose research addresses climate solutions are encouraged to apply. We are most interested in attracting researchers who bring new methods to these fields. Applicants who bring interesting or novel methods (whether in applied theory or empirics) will be preferred, other things equal. We also look for candidates who can take advantage of our location in the Rausser College of Natural Resources, with excellent faculty in complementary disciplines such as environmental science, nutrition, and plant and microbial biology.

Our department is committed to addressing the family needs of faculty, including dual career couples and single parents. We are also interested in candidates who have had non-traditional career paths or who have taken time off for family reasons.
